PLUCKY WIFE

Locates Recreant Husband Near This City.

Mrs. William Burton, who arrived here Tuesday with her eight children, located her recreant husband on Ira Crabb's farm where he was employed as a farm hand, as related by the REPUBLICAN yesterday. She used the telephone and that evening he came in for an interview. The fact that Burton was living with another woman was soon brought to light. He concluded that it would be expedient for him to make some shifts, therefore he got away from this community the next day, but where he went no one knows. The woman he has lived with here, whose name is said to be Eliza Bryant, got away on a later train. This left Mrs. Burton No. 1 and her eight children in charge of the house which Burton and the other woman had occupied on the Crabb farm. What they will do next remains to be seen. They surely deserve sympathy. She came from some point in Arkansas where she says she and Burton formerly lived.

Burton came here last January and secured work on Mr. Crabb's farm. He remained ten days and then left saying he was obliged to go to Louisville. He came back after two weeks and went to work again. A little later he claimed to have business calling him away. He was gone three weeks and came back and begged for work again. He went to work again and again claimed that important business called him away again. He left and was gone five or six months. When he returned he said he had been in Kentucky. All this time he claimed that woman with him was his wife, thus deceiving his employer.

The Mrs. Burton, who is now here, tells a straight story and what she says about her marriage relations is believed.

Tax Paying Time.

Tax paying time is here again. Only two months remain in which to pay the fall installment. This is a note of warning. The first Monday in November will be here before one is almost aware of the fact and if taxes are not paid before that date they will be delinquent. Better pay now before the rush. If you can't call on the treasurer personally mail him a check. The receipt you received at the spring payment will tell you how much you owe for the fall payment. All city taxes are also paid at this time at the office of the county treasurer. Don't go delinquent.

Pole Cartooned.

In the window at Cox's Pharmacy is a cartoon, made by Earl Cox, illustrating the finding of the North Pole by Dr. Cook. On top of the imaginary pole is a big polar bear and below is Dr. Cook and his Eskimau companions holding a jubilee. They are smoking Cox's Standard cigars and seem to be enjoying them very thoroughly. The cartoon is attracting much attention.

Picnic Successful.

The Methodist Sunday school picnic in the city park Thursday afternoon and evening was a decided success. The crowd was good, especially in the evening when probably 500 people were in the park. The children of the school had a very enjoyable time. Swings were provided and various amusements were indulged in. The weather was good for an outdoor gathering.

DIED.

BASEHEART—Prof. E. M. Ross, of the Seymour Business College, received a message today announcing the death of Mrs. Ross' mother, Mrs. Fred Baseheart, at eight o'clock this morning at her home at McHenry, Ky. She had been ill only three or four days. She was about 65 years of age and leaves a husband and five children, two sons and three daughters, of whom Mrs. Ross is the youngest. Prof. Ross will go to Kentucky this evening and return Saturday night. Mrs. Ross is already at the home of her parents where she has been visiting for several days.

COLE'S SMOKE HOUSE.

Much Truth In This.

The other day a merchant in a nearby town saw a farmer receiving goods at the station from a Chicago mail order house, remarks an exchange. The goods were in his line and had been carried in his store for years. He approached the farmer and said: "I could have sold you every article you have there for less money than you paid to the Chicago house, and saved you the freight besides."

"Then why on earth didn't you say so?" answered the farmer. "I have taken the home paper for years but have never seen a line about your selling these goods. The Chicago house sent advertising matter to me asking for my trade, and they got it."

Hays Family Reunion.

Walter Thompson and family, of Orange, New Jersey, visited in the family of Mrs. Thompson's brother, W. W. Hays, the latter part of last week. This is Mrs. Thompson's first visit to Jackson county for twenty-six years. On Friday they enjoyed a family reunion, at which the following brothers and sisters were present:

Mrs. Anna Woodmansee, W. W. Hays, of this place; Robt. D. Hays, of Cortland; Ed Hays, of Seymour; Thomas Hays, of this township, and Mrs. Thompson, of New Jersey. One brother in Chicago, was not present.—Brownstown Banner.

Watermelon Feast.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kasperlain gave a watermelon feast Thursday evening at their home on Indianapolis avenue. The affair was arranged for the members of the Court of Honor, quite a number of whom were present. Watermelons and muskmelons were supplied in abundance and the guests were also entertained with music and games. They feel under obligations to Mr. and Mrs. Kasperlain and daughter for the splendid entertainment of the evening.

$800 an Acre.

A few days ago the REPUBLICAN told something of the life and success in the far west of O. L. Kenney, who is here visiting his sister, Mrs. Geo. Cole after being away 26 years. He owns a ranch near Hamilton, Montana, which is largely devoted to fruit. As an evidence of the value of land there the following paragraph clipped from a Hamilton paper is republished:

"Dr. Geo. V. I. Brown of Milwaukee Saturday purchased 10 acres of land of Lawrence Carey for $8000. The land is planted to a mature orchard and is a part of the famous Kress & Carey orchard. McIntosh Red apples grown on this land last year took third prize at the national apple show at Spokane and first prize at the state fair at Helena. Dr. Brown Monday opened a deal for 10 acres more of the orchard at the same price."

This ten acres of land is two miles west of Hamilton in the Bitter Root valley.

Recovery Doubtful.

Charles Brown, a B. & O. bridge carpenter, who fell from a trestle at Shoals two weeks ago and was seriously injured, is now in a critical condition. He fell about twenty feet and his head struck the stone at the side of the street. His skull was badly fractured in the top part of the head. The wound was looked after by local physicians and Mr. Brown improved and was able to walk out in town. Later on grew worse and at times was not in his right mind. A specialist was called from Louisville to see him and it was found that a portion of the broken skull had penetrated the brain and caused an abscess. He is now paralyzed and his recovery is not expected. He is twenty-three years of age and single, and a nephew of R. H. Peek, of this city, who went to Shoals this morning to remain until Monday or longer.

Brakeman Improving.

Oliver Jones, the brakeman, who was seriously injured while pulling cars at Mitchell Wednesday, is still in a serious condition. He remains in a sort of stupor and sleeps most of the time except when aroused. His physicians have ordered him to be kept quiet and visitors will not be allowed till he has shown marked improvement. His mother and two sisters who came down from Walesboro, returned home Thursday evening.

MAKES GOOD FLOUR

Last Crop of Wheat One of the Best For Flour Making.

Newspaper readers have doubtless noticed the many articles that have been published of late derogatory more or less of the crop of Winter Wheat recently harvested, stating that same was light in weight and deficient in quality because it had been water soaked in the shock and more or less injured by the ravages of the green bug.

We ourselves had not ground a great deal of the new crop of Wheat before we discovered that instead of being the poor one such as the newspapers have generally been describing it was one of the very best crops of Wheat so far as Flour-making quality is concerned that has ever been raised in the Winter Wheat territory.

It is, therefore, with much satisfaction as well as pleasure that we received such communications as came in this morning when our Glasgow, Scotland, correspondent had the following in his letter of August 25th:—"Your first shipment of 250 twenty-stone bags of Copyright has arrived this week per Steamship, 'Fernessia' as advised. We have examined the Flour carefully and it is very good indeed, although a little bit yellow in color, which, of course, age will improve and help very considerably."

This first export shipment of Flour we made the present season has arrived about one month later than is customary, due altogether to the lateness of our harvest this year, but we are very glad indeed to have this corroboration of our own opinion regarding the quality of the Flour made from present crop.

Diversified Program.

With the coming of Natiello and his band to the Majestic Theatre on Saturday evening, Sept. 11, comes the assurance of high grade concerts of classical and popular music, a program so diversified as to please all people. The magnificent singing of so celebrated a songstress as Marie Rossi should alone crowd the house; but there are others, among whom should be mentioned Vincent Riso, the great euphonium player, whose marvelous baritone solos were long a feature with Sousa and have added laurels to the Natiello band.

The Milanese Saxophone Quartette is also a popular attraction with the band as likewise are the piano solos of Joseph Lannin, the Boston protégé of Paderewski. In fact, the programs of this band present more novelties than any other concert band of the country, Natiello being an adept at program building.

According to the information, Mr. Burton recently completed a deal involving the sale to a New York syndicate of 500,000 acres of Texas land, receiving as his commission about $200,000. He has returned to Kansas and it is said will seek to succeed Senator Bristow in the senate.

Hoosier Apples.

Why is Indiana a failure as an apple state? In the days of Apple-Seed Johnny Indiana produced delicious apples, and the crop amounted to something. Today, Hoosier apples are a joke, and a fine orchard adds almost nothing to the value of a farm. And all this in the very face of scientific investigation, carried on at great expense to the state and nation.—Knox Republican.

The above paragraph is suggestive. The older residents often talk about the big apple crops in Indiana forty years ago and it is no wonder they have become skeptical about the modern scientific methods of fruit raising.

SCIENTIFIC MOTHERHOOD.

Profession of Most Women to Be Held in Honor and Not Neglected.

Scientific study of child life is more and more forcefully drawing attention to the great importance of early influences, Prof. W. I. Thomas and other psychologists agreeing that so impressionable are the first years and so nearly indelible the effects of early influences that in order thoroughly to safeguard the future of children they should be removed from all evil surroundings before they have reached the age of 3 months, says Vogue. According to these authorities the child's brain is completely formed when it is 8 years old (being short only in experience and practice), and if this be true, since the mother is the child's closest companion during these impressionable formative years, and so creates its "ground pattern of character" almost from the moment of its birth, it can readily be seen what enormous responsibility devolves upon her and how necessary it is that she be given generous education in school and after life.

As a matter of fact, however, how far removed from truly intelligent motherhood, even in the more advanced countries, is the great majority of women? And is it not possible that this lack of proper training for the important profession accounts for the very slow upward progress of the race as regards both ethics and physical health? Indeed, the children's courts, which have been hailed, and rightly, as a most enlightened development in legal procedure, in themselves constitute a drastic arraignment of motherhood, a recent investigation of 700-odd cases in New York showing that only thirty-two of the little culprits were motherless. Wise as distinguished from merely sentimental mothers might have saved these children not only arrest but perhaps lives of dishonor and the community the expense of their correction and maintenance in prison.

In Oriental countries where harems are recognized institutions the evil effects of a wholly ignorant motherhood are markedly exemplified and yet, while as compared to such civilization, lands like England and the United States appear very advanced, is this superiority more than relative, or is there much for us to boast of when among us theft and trickery—from stealing rides on car lines to swindling the national government by fraudulent weighing devices—are such common occurrences, and when our hospitals are full to overflowing? Does the mother who lies about the age of her child to save a miserable nickel—small price for a soul—realize her responsibility in giving direction to her child's character? Yet what, if not a lesson in swindling, does he get out of such a transaction?

Apparently a large number of women are so busy fussing about what they allege to be their rights that they have no time to devote to the study of the profession which about 80 per cent of them take up. However, there are indications that public opinion is beginning to be stirred on the subject, although it is men who are taking the lead in a scientific movement which it might have been supposed would long ago have been started by the more enlightened members of women's clubs. It is certainly discreditable in the highest degree that women should have left the reform of their leading profession to men.

FOXY GERMAN EMPEROR.

Has Got 18,600 Square Miles from His Friend, Abdul Hamid.

The Kaiser, finding himself isolated as the result of French and British diplomacy, debarré on every hand from territorial expansion in Europe, had dreamed of a commercial empire in Asia, F. Alexander Powell says in Everybody's. But Wilhelm is the kind of a man who prefers to see things with his own eyes, and that is why, in the spring of 1897, he set out on his spectacular tour of the near east. He rode through Palestine in a theatrical uniform made for the occasion, with a great cavalcade behind him. At Jerusalem he laid the corner stone of a German church; at Haifa he addressed a great assemblage of German colonists; from Damascus he carried away with him the priceless furnishings of the palace which he occupied, loaned, for the occasion, by the neighboring pashas; at Ba'albek a peculiarly hideous tablet was placed in the Temple of Venus to mark his visit, and so he came to Stamboul, where Abdul Hamid, his friend and brother, awaited him.

Imagine, if you can, a more queerly assorted pair. The sultan, crafty, cautious, timid, patient; the Kaiser, bombastic, blatant, botheaded, domineering. This meeting of the monarchs was as curious as any in modern history—the one a ruler in spite of his physical cowardice, and the shrewdest diplomat in Europe; the other a sort of footlight king. Humble, patient and furtive, the master of Turkey listened, while the war lord thundered. Always he dilated on his great idea, the Drang nach Osten—that onswep to the east of German imperialism. This strangely mated pair, these masters of east and west, made a compact that the one would abstain from intervening in Crete and would use his influence to obtain the withdrawal of the International soldiery from the island, and that the other would give him, in payment, a right-of-way for his railroad across Turkey-in-Asia. And so they arranged it between them, the bilious, saw-toothed, silent little man with his eternal cigarette, and the stoutish, aggressive, domineering Teuton who puffed intermittently at a black cigar. * * * The sultan had, indeed, bartered a kingdom for the Kaiser's friendship. To the German concessionaires was given the exclusive right to cultivate the land within this railway zone—18,000 square miles in all, and every foot of it, to all intents and purposes, German soil—to work the mines and the forests within the radius; to grow wheat, tobacco and cotton; to colonize and to navigate the streams, not to mention various subsidiary rights. The concession admits moreover, of the concessionaires' utilizing all water along the route for electric purposes; and such power will eventually be used, it is planned, for lighting their towns and running their factories.

Carlyle Amused Queen.

Queen Victoria's objection to Gladstone's conversational methods when national business was under discussion is well known. She complained that he talked to her as if she were "a public meeting." But the late queen could stand a talking to on occasion.

Once when Thomas Carlyle was her guest she ventured to express her opinion on some topic of the day. Carlyle's opinion differed and the queen was overwhelmed by a torrent of scornful condemnation as the sage of Chelsea poured out his ideas on the matter. Certainly the queen had never been so flatly and entirely contradicted or received such an intellectual drubbing. But she enjoyed it thoroughly and frequently told of it with gusto.

At Queen Victoria's dinner parties conversation was never general. It was governed by the queen, and people spoke when they were spoken to by her. But dinner parties given by the king or at which the king is present are a very different matter.

Having selected the guests, there is no further social interference from him. Every one talks as he wishes or keeps silent, and no one is expected to sparkle or to be unnatural. But it is well known that any one who can amuse the king or tell him a good story is very much persona grata.

But Edward VII. can punish an infringement. A very wealthy man whose money had been made out of clothing once remarked to him that he did not intend to make one of a certain house party, as "the company was so mixed."

"Hang it, man," was the king's reply, "what would you have? We can't all be tailors."

Odd Death Certificates.

Certificates of death are not documents where one usually seeks for humor, but there is frequently to be found in them much of the unconscious variety. Here, for instance, is how the cause of death is stated in the case of a laborer:

"Died from injuries received through a bull accidentally kneeling on his chest."

The consideration shown for the feelings of the bull is a fine touch and suggests grave questions on the moral responsibility of the lower animals.

Again, a man is stated to have "died from the effects of injuries received after being run over by a railway train in motion owing to a misunderstanding between deceased and an engine driver." This description of a rather ordinary railway casualty is excellent.—London Express.

Sensitive Tobacco Plants.

In Cuba the best tobacco comes from one strip of land only, the slopes of a certain river, and even there a north wind may ruin the crop. Tobacco is the most sensitive plant we know of. The smallest thing affects its flavor. Plant Virginia tobacco in Germany, and the result is a better tobacco, but it is German tobacco, not Virginian. In north Borneo they produce the most delicate and silky leaves that ever were seen, but the tobacco lacks character and taste. Send Havana seeds to the Philippines, and you merely produce a superior Manila.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Depends on Point of View.

An Englishman and an Irishman were overheard discussing Miss Annette Kellerman and her "Diving Venus" act at the Fifth Avenue Theatre recently. Said the former:

"She came nearer swimming the Channel than anybody ever did."

"How close did she come?" inquired the Irishman.

"Eleven miles."

"Which coast?"

"The English, I think."

"Then, begorra, that was close enough."—Success Magazine.

She Knew.

"When we are married," she cooed, "I shall keep you in love with me all ways. I know the way."

"And what is your recipe, dear?" he asked, drawing her closer.

"I shall spend heaps and heaps of money on nice dresses and always look as pretty as I can!"

What Betty Thinks of Bobby.

My brother is the grandest boy! You ought to see him jump from big, high steps where I'm afraid, he just comes down ker-plump!

I'm just exactly Bobby's size, 'cause we are twins, you see; But Bobby knows such heaps of things—and tells them all to me.

He tells me every single day, "You don't know nothin' 't all! Now, Betty, while I fix this play, you sit still on the wall."

Sometimes he says, "Don't bother me," and then I know, of course, He's making up some game about my dolly and his horse.

And if I tell him what to do, he'll do it—but he'll say, "Pooh, Betty, I know that! I meant to do it, anyway!"

He's very kind, my brother is—he's not like other boys; Why, when he doesn't want them, I can always have our toys.

And generous! He always offers me the biggest bun; But 'course I have to be polite—I take the other one.

He lets me watch him building things; he doesn't mind a bit. And when he wants a nail or string, he lets me run for it.

And when we play, he lets me choose what I think is most fun; Then, if he doesn't like that game, we choose another one.

Bobby is very brave and bold. I s'pose, as like as not, If 'leven tigers came at once, he'd kill them with one shot!

For Bobby says he's not afraid of bears or any beast; And he can shoot an elephant! He told me so, at least.

I do love Bobby. And sometimes I tell him so. But he says gruffly (he's a boy, you know), "Oh, pshaw, don't bother me!"

Of course I'd rather be a girl—but lots of fun I miss. When Bobby says, "No, girls can't go. You couldn't stand it, Sis."

I guess I could! I'm big as Bob; for we are twins, you see. But Bobby knows so much, of course, and tells it all to me.

Sometimes he lets me hear him say his spelling lesson through; And then I do his sums for him, and he says, "Good for you!"

It makes me feel so glad and proud, to think that I can be Even a little help to Bob, when he's so good to me.

Marjory's Shop.

Marjory had searched the meadows, Marjory had searched the woods, and Marjory's shop was ready for customers. Her shop was the latticed arbor at the end of the box-bordered garden path; the seats along the sides and the small round table were the counter and shelves on which the shopkeeper displayed her stock. All the wares stood in dishes of water, for they were blossoms and herbs and plants that Marjory had picked in meadows and woods.

Aunt Sophia came down the box-bordered path to the arbor shop. She rang the bluebell fastened to the doorpost, and Marjory put on her most hospitable smile.

"Good morning, Miss Sophia!" she said, as nearly like the real shop-keeper as she could speak. "What can I sell you to-day?"

"What is there in the market?" inquired Aunt Sophia, discreetly.

"Fresh butter-and-eggs, just in an hour ago," suggested Clerk Marjory.

"How fortunate!" said Aunt Sophia. "I have only one buttercup left at home. Some mustard, please. Do I really see fresh vegetables blooming in that china mug?"

Clerk Marjory laughed joyously. "Heaps of wild carrot, Miss Sophia, and white lettuce and Indian cucumber root and one Indian turnip."

Aunt Sophia bought for dinner wild carrot, white lettuce, Indian cucumber root, the one Indian turnip, lamb's quarters for meat and for dessert honeysuckle. She also supplied her self with sassafras root, caraway, balm of Gilead leaves, bloodroot, wintergreen, spearmint and bonaset, all of which are good to have on hand.

Clerk Marjory recommended the bonaset. "I know personally about it," she assured Aunt Sophia. "When Doll Caroline broke her arm by falling out of the sweet apple tree onto a rock, I applied bonaset externally—as well as glue internally—and her recovery was marvelous! Shall I charge the goods, Miss Sophia?" asked Clerk Marjory politely.

"No, I thank you," replied Aunt Sophia. "I will pay now."

She took a small box from her bag, and Marjory's eyes danced with interest when she saw what it contained. "Here is a jeweled and goldthread," said Aunt Sophia, "and for small change, silver shillings and pennyroyal."—Youth's Companion.

NOT BIDDING FOR FAME.

The kindness and modesty of an unknown man who saved a small boy's life have furnished the New York correspondent of the Chicago Tribune with a human little story.

Bertie Kavanagh, who is seven years old, went to Central Park one afternoon lately to sail his boat on Conservatory Pond. In reaching out too far from the board walk, he tumbled in. Johnny Cusack, eight years old, was the only person who saw him.

"Bertie's in the lake and drowning!" cried Johnny, as he ran up to several other boys who were interested in their own boats.

The boys could see nothing of Bertie, and none of them dared venture into the lake. A man in overalls was sitting on a bench a short distance away, and one of the boys told him what had happened.

The man dropped the newspaper he had been reading, and went with the messenger. He jumped in, clothes and all, and felt about the bottom with his feet.

The water was breast-high. After a time he felt something, and reaching down, he found the boy clinging to some roots at the bottom. He broke the boy's grasp and carried him to the board walk. A policeman came down on the run, and sent for an ambulance.

"What's your name and address?" the policeman asked the rescuer.

"The policeman difference does it make who I am?" responded the man.

"I want to get it on the records," said the policeman.

"G'wan with your records! I'm no hero. I got kids of me own home with the old woman," said the man, as he squeezed some water from his clothes and started for the park entrance.

The ambulance surgeon resuscitated Bertie.

SECRET COULD NOT BE KEPT.

Everybody Seemed to Know This Couple Were Newly Married.

A Boston young man had married a Chicago girl, and they had started on their wedding tour. Despite—or perhaps because of—their studied efforts to appear like "old married folks," their fellow passengers on the railway train had no difficulty in classing them as bride and groom, and manifested their knowledge by winks, nods and grins.

An unfortunate accident to the dining car compelled the conductor to leave it on the sidetrack at a small station, and it was several hours before the train stopped for refreshments at a town where there was a restaurant near the passenger station.

It was by no means a first-class restaurant, but the travelers had a first-class appetite and they swarmed into it. With some difficulty the bride and groom found seats and presently a waitress came to take their order.

"Where's your bill of fare?" asked the young man.

"We haven't any to-day, sir," she answered.

"Nor any other day perhaps?"

"No, sir."

"Well, what have you that you can recommend as being good to eat?"

"We have some nice pork and beans."

"Alfred," whispered the bride, "everybody seems to know that we have just been married, but how do you suppose this girl has found out that I am from Chicago and that you are from Boston?"—Youth's Companion.

Wanted an Encore.

Robert, the small son of Mr. Brant, has lately acquired a stepmother. Hoping to win his affection, this new parent has been very lenient with him, while his father, feeling his responsibility, has been unusually strict. The boys of the neighborhood, who had taken pains to warn Robert of the terrible character of stepmothers in general, recently waited on him in a body and the following conversation was overheard:

"How do you like your stepmother, Bob?"

"Like her! Why, fellers, I just love her. All I wish is I had a stepfather, too."—Woman's Home Companion.

"That little girl," remarked the druggist to the doctor, "was just in for 10 cents' worth of tincture of benzine. But I've had it before and gave her benzoin."

"That was easy," answered the doctor. "This morning on a diphtheria case the woman wanted to know if I administered antitoxin with an epidemic syringe."—New York Press.

The difference between the righteous and the unrighteous is a good deal more than a matter of a crease in the trousers.

Some of the people who talk most about seeing God in nature in the summer seem to be looking for Him in the newspapers in winter.

COMFORT IN SUMMER CLOTHES.

Resistance to Heat Acquired by a Few Precautionary Measures.

The coat for summer wear should be loose and of some light open-weave material, says Dr. W. R. C. Latson in Outing. A very common fault in all coats is that the collar is made too short, thus causing more or less pressure upon the back of the neck. This pull of the coat collar tends to drag the head of the wearer forward, thus contracting the chest and interfering with the action of the lungs and other vital organs. This means a lowering of the body's powers of breathing and other vital functions. This, of course, means a loss of general vitality and diminution of the body's power to resist the heat; and thus adds more than one would think to the discomforts of the hot weather.

As to the waistcoat, the garment is bad enough at any time, but during the hot weather it is an abomination. It is gratifying to note that "well-dressed men discard the waistcoat during the summer.

Suspenders are happily little worn during the summer. Nor should they be, either then or at any other season. For the suspenders are uncomfortable and injurious in many ways. They are uncomfortable because, of all the appliances worn by men, they produce the most incessant, strong and unrelenting pressure. Air can pass through the coat, the shirt, even the waistcoat; but under the place where the suspenders cling about the chest, back and shoulders, no air can get. As every man knows, the suspenders are the hottest thing he can possibly wear.

And why wear them at all? "Well," says some one, "if you don't wear suspenders you must wear a tight belt, and that is nearly as bad."

True, a tight belt is nearly as bad, but it is not necessary to wear a tight belt—or a belt at all, unless you wish to do so for appearance's sake.

How, then, are we to keep the trousers in place? Very easily. Have the trousers cut so as to fit snugly over the hips; have the buckles at the sides just over the hip bones, instead of at the back, and you will have not the slightest discomfort or difficulty in keeping the trousers up.

The pressure is distributed over the hips and the sacral region so that it is felt hardly at all. There is perfect freedom of the trunk and shoulders and there is no need for the tightly drawn belt that is not only ugly and uncomfortable but actually injurious.

In my own case I have not worn either suspenders or belt for twenty years, but have worn trousers which, being cut with a closely fitting body, have kept themselves in place without the slightest discomfort or annoyance.

Tailors call trousers cut in this way "hip trousers," and any good practical cutter can draft the pattern so that the trousers shall be, as they ought to be, very full across the lower part of the seat and the thighs, falling in artistic lines to the ankle, and yet holding a firm, gentle grip over the hips.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. CHAS. BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

The Human Tongue.

Some remarkable facts regarding the tongue have been recently presented by the eminent surgeon, Dr. E. Souchoin, of New Orleans. The doctor, after stating that the tongue, the nose and the skin are the only organs of special sense which perform other functions, remarks that the tongue is the only organ except the heart which presents a base, a body and an apex, is the only organ which can protrude out of the cavity in which it is contained, and that no other organ can assume such a variety of shapes or is so movable. Its papillae, though similar to those of other mucous membranes, are larger and more specially developed, and those in the anterior two-thirds differ from those in the posterior third. The tongue presents a dual structure in accordance with its dual functions, motor and sensory, varies in color more than any other organ, and is more solid than any other viscus. It is the only organ presenting the three kinds of nerve, namely a nerve of special sense, one of ordinary sensation, and one of motion.

THREE REASONS.

Each with Two Legs and Ten Fingers.

A Boston woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experience feeding her boys.

Among other things she says:

"Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Bob, Jack and Dick, aged 6, 4 and 2 years respectively, are three of our reasons for using and recommending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other children would have been given candy."

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3-year-old child was a weakened little thing, ill half the time. The little tot ate the Grape-Nuts and cream greedily and the mother continued the good work and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts."

"Both husband and I use Grape-Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march."

Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is soon shown in greatly increased health, strength and mental activity.

They That Wait on the Lord.

"I have no time to wait," I said,
"My life is full of tasks;
I grudge a moment from my work
To give the help one asks;
My burdened heart and weary brain
Have scarcely time for prayer;
I am a servant all day long,
And wanted everywhere.
Not half is done I ought to do,
And the time is very late—
Lord, give Thy blessing while I work,
And bid me not to wait."

Through weary days I struggled on,
But the light was faint for me;
How could I do the finest work
With eyes too tired to see?
At last I cast my burden down—
"Lord, Thy will be done," I said;
Then a great peace came over me,
And I was not afraid.

My Lord had waited patiently
Through the long time; and He Was kind and very merciful
And gracious unto me.
I did not even try to work,
I sought not any quest;
He laid His hand on heart and head
And I was glad to rest;
For all the rush and haste were gone,
And I was stilled at length;
Then, rising, took my work again,
And a new gift of strength.
—Marianne Farningham.

In the Book of Remembrance.

Illinois had more soldiers than any other State in the siege of Vicksburg. Recently the State has erected on the battlefield a monument patterned after the Pantheon, within the walls of which are preserved on bronze tablets the names of all soldiers of the State who fought in the battles about Vicksburg. With other States it has joined in locating the positions of its various regiments and batteries and marking them with suitable monuments.

When the memorial was dedicated, very many of the old soldiers went back for the first time to view the scene of their sufferings. Among others was a soldier of the One Hundred and Eighth Illinois, who took with him his wife, to whom he hoped to show just where his regiment had performed a faithful and perilous service.

One does not need to know much of human nature, and especially of old soldiers, to realize how much the trip meant to this one, and how keenly he looked forward to showing his wife the very spot which he had described to her so often.

They rode together over the miles of roadway which had been made to facilitate access to the field; and he noted with growing enthusiasm how every regiment which he remembered seemed to have its position accurately marked. And so at length he sought the position of his own regiment at Young's Point, only to find that the changing channel of the river had completely obliterated the spot.

On the opposite shore stood a monument, stating that on the other side the provisional brigade, containing among other regiments the One Hundred and Eighth Illinois, had done its duty. That was all.

He remembered what that duty had been. The regiment had been sent away with prisoners, and when it returned, the siege lines had been drawn and the regiments assigned, and the One Hundred and Eighth had lost its own place in its own brigade and had been grouped with other regiments to hold this muddy point of the river.

They were shut out from participation in the desperate charges; yet such was their peril in the swamps that in sixty days they buried 134 men from out their five hundred. Desperately heroic service it had been, yet the memory of it, and the very place itself, had been washed down the river and had left no adequate memorial! The disappointment was all the harder to bear because of the anticipation of pleasure in which the veteran had indulged and which he had hoped to share.

But he went to the Illinois Pantheon and there found his name cast in bronze, and the names of his comrades and the friends he remembered, hidden among the thousands, but imperishably recorded.

He walked over the battlefields side by side with Confederate veterans and talked with them as brothers. He was the guest of one of these, his former enemies, and on Sunday went to church with him, and sitting in his pew, received with him the bread and wine of a holy communion, the fellowship of a world redeemed through blood and sacrifice. And he rejoiced to discover that even here on earth and in the hearts of men there is written a Book of Remembrance.

The river speeds on its way, covering the spot where brave men fought and were buried in graves that, shallow as they were, did not escape the water-line. A country saved and brotherhood established make an abiding memorial. Onward, too, sweeps the river of time, obliterating many a landmark. But high on the bluff of the other shore, above the sweep and whirl of the waters, is the record, sufficient and imperishable, that on the other side, in a spot dear to the memory of God, a human soul did its duty.—Youth's Companion.

Light and Shadow.

He is a wise man who not only recognizes the light that forces its way softly, steadily, surely through the darkest, heaviest cloud, but who remembers on the darkest possible day that "above the clouds is the sun still shining," and that in due time, in God's own time, the darkness will disappear. Shadows are as useful as sunlight. They are the pleasant results of sunlight. They protect us from the discomfort or damage the sunlight on occasion might do. One personally shades his own eyes with his hand that he may best use the intensity of light that fills the heavens. Mother sometimes thus helps her child's vision. And God thus occasionally helps us when we need the clearer and more definite vision that a too vivid light renders impossible.

It is such a comfort to know that God knows what is best for us; and that He cares enough about us to make sure that we get the best. What a pity we fail to appreciate God's wise way!—Bishop Vincent.

Casting Cares Upon the Lord.

The Christian is told to cast all his cares upon Christ. It is inevitable that the Christian will have his cares, for of one sort or another it is a concomitant of all active and useful living. There are some cares that are needlessly incurred, while there are others that cannot be escaped. But in any case the only wise way to do is to cast that inescapable care upon the Lord. He is stronger than we are, and He invites us to ask Him to bear the load which would crush our unsupported strength. It is all that a man can do to live life well with the Lord to help him—it is utterly beyond his power to live as life should be lived without divine assistance. Cares to oneself are unprofitable—cares cast upon the Lord become like golden gem-set crowns.

A Prayer.

Gracious God, we pray that Thou wilt fill us with aspiration of holiness unto the Lord. Take from our hearts the sins of selfishness, indifference and doubt, and replace them with the spirit of Thine own great love and the assurance of perfect faith. Quickened our hearts to respond to the voices singing forth Thy praise in the beautiful world around us, and help us to live our thanks for Thy wonderful mercies toward the children of men. Enrich our lives with the Christly graces which will make them fragrant and fruitful in the world of Christian service, and make us day by day a blessing unto others through the fellowship of Thy love.

INHERITED SPORTS.

If ever young folk lived happy lives and had especially good times on extra occasions, the Dutch boys and girls in both Old and New Netherland certainly did. Besides St. Nicholas' day, on December 6th, there were Christmas, New Year's day, Twelfth night, Easter, Pinxter, Ker mis and school holidays and feast days coming pretty steadily through out the year. W. E. Griffis, author of "The Story of New Netherland," says that all kinds of games, especially winter sports, were in high favor.

Holland is the land of skates and sleighs. Children and young people hardly learn to skate; they begin it naturally and keep it up all their lives. Whether for fun or in parties or to go to the market, to church, to weddings or funerals, they move by rapid transit on steel. A pair of skates is a passport to comradeship.

Every habit and each trick known on Holland canals or ponds were reproduced on the Mohawk and Hudson. There was the ice-boat, or sailboat on runners, sometimes reduced for swiftness to a long plank with cross pieces for seats and with skate irons. Equipped with mast, canvas and some courage, it seemed to race with the wind itself.

As for coasting, wherever flat Holland could show a hill or slope, or Friesland furnished a torp or artificial mound, there were the boys and girls at fun. On the ice, lady or lass sat in a hand-sleigh, while husband or swain pushed as he skated.

All this shows the reason why Newburg-on-the-Hudson and Albany and the hills of Dorp are so famous for coasting, and the North River for ice yachts; and why, from the first generation of settlers, the Dutch-American towns were noted for sledding, sleighing and skating.

Some Facts About Tea.

It is known that tea was used as a beverage in China in the sixth century, and that it was carried into Japan and its cultivation established there late in the thirteenth century, says the National Food Magazine.

That many centuries elapsed ere Western nations learned of tea is certain. Even the date of its first introduction among Western nations is in dispute, one authority giving it as 1591, another as early in the seventeenth century; but as they agree that it was brought to Europe by the Dutch East India Company, and as that was only founded in 1602, it is probable that the latter date is correct.

The tea flower is small, single, white, and has no smell; the seeds are three small nuts, like filberts, and have an oily and bitter taste.

The leaves only are used, and the younger and tenderer they are the better. They are collected when the plant is three years old, the process being continued year after year until the bush becomes weak and diseased, when it is pulled up to give place to a new shoot.

It doesn't take very much champagne to make a man think he is the only star on the flag.

Most people, according to the Optical Journal, believe that the eyes in reading follow the letters in a steady movement clear across the column, but if the reader's eyes are watched closely while in action it will be seen that they make a series of jumping movements, each jump corresponding to about one-half inch of letters. This shows that reading is done more by words than by letters, and that the words are read without having to look directly at them.

A wealthy resident of Moscow owns the smallest watch in the world, which once belonged to the last empress of Brazil. It was made in Geneva by the famous watchmaker, W. Zogelin, and cost over 5,000 guineas. It has a diameter of one-fifth part of an inch, and is set in an artistically worked finger-ring, which is studded with diamonds. If the watch is taken out of its ring case it can be set in the mouth of a cigarette-holder. Zogelin is said to have worked three years on it, and permanently weakened his eyesight in the task.

A telephage system capable of handling three-ton loads is in use on the wharf of a steamship line at Richmond, Va., for transferring freight from the vessels to the warehouses and cars, and it is said to operate much more economically and with greater facility than the hand-propelled trucks formerly used for the purpose. It consists of a pair of trolleys on an elevated runway, carrying a frame with hoists for raising and lowering the merchandise trucks. The system is electrically operated, and the control is centered in a cab attached to the device, in which the operator is located.

Dr. Johnson would not have consented to pronounce "wind" differently in prose and in verse. He insisted upon making the "i" long always. The story goes that, in order to crush somebody who preferred the short "i" in ordinary conversation, Johnson, rhyming all three words with "tinned," remarked, "I can not find it in my mind to call it wind, but" (rhyming all three words with "blind") "I can find it in my mind to call it wind." But his adversary got the better of him. Johnson himself always pronounced "gold" as "goold." "If I may be so bold," said the other, "I should like to be told why you call it gold."

In a mountain near Montalban, Luzon, there is a large cavern with many branching chambers, and a central dome two hundred feet in height, perforating the mountain top, from which, in December, 1907, Hugh M. Smith saw issue a solid column of bats, which flew rapidly in a straight line for fifteen minutes, disappearing over a mountain range in the direction of Manila, without a single bat having left the column. American engineers stationed there told Mr. Smith that the flight of bats had occurred at practically the same time each day during two years. From other sources it was learned that the phenomenon had been observed for at least thirty years.

Siberian delegates to the congress of "popeless old believers," recently held in Moscow, sternly denounced tea drinking. They maintain that the use of tea, coffee, sugar, vodka and tobacco and also the practice of shaving the beard were heretical. The question of tea drinking was discussed at length, the Siberians standing out for the excommunication of persons guilty of these sins and for their exclusion from the church until they repented of their wickedness. They declared that tea drinkers were guilty of the sin of gluttony. The congress finally declared that the practices denounced were not heretical, although undoubtedly sinful. In future tea drinkers are to be excluded from public worship until they amend their habit.

PECULIAR FORMS OF BREAD.

Substitutes for Baked Loaves That Are Common in Europe.

Baked loaves of bread are practically unknown in many parts of south Austria and Italy as well as the agricultural districts of Roumania, says the Baker's Weekly. In the villages of the Obersteiermark, not very many miles from Vienna, bread is seldom seen, the staple food of the people being sturz, a kind of porridge made from ground beech nuts, which is taken at breakfast with fresh or curdled milk, at dinner with broth or fried in lard, and with milk again at supper. The sturz is also known as beiden, and takes the place of bread not only in Steiermark but in Carinthia and in many parts of the Tyrol.

In the north of Italy the peasantry live chiefly on polenta, a porridge made of boiled maize. The polenta, however, is not allowed to granulate like Scotch porridge, or like the Austrian sturz, but is boiled into a solid pudding, which is cut up and portioned out with a string. It is eaten cold as often as it is hot, and is in every sense the Italian peasant's daily bread. The modern Roumanians are held by many scholars to be descended from a Roman colony. In other words to be the cousins of the Italians, and curiously enough a variation of the polenta called mamaliga is the national dish of Roumania.

The mamaliga is like the polenta in that it is made of boiled maize, but it is unlike the latter in one important respect, as the grains are not allowed to settle into a solid mass but are kept distinct, after the fashion of oatmeal porridge.

"SAM" HOUSTON.

Perhaps no more original character has ever been in the United States Senate than "Sam" Houston. He was most conspicuous in the history of Texas between 1836 and 1845. Later he represented that state in the Senate. In the pages of "Memoirs of a Senate Page" is an account of the man as he appeared in that body. He was the product of the Southwest at a time when life there was the life of "the border." The picture given shows what the rough nature of campaigning can yield.

Sam Houston was one of the gentlest and most kindly natures I have ever known. He was a true friend and a gallant gentleman. Day after day, during spare moments, he sat there in his seat carving hearts out of soft pine wood. They were pieces about the size of the hand.

When he had completed one of these works of art he would summon a page, and pointing toward some fair spectator in the gallery, would say, "Give this to that lady up there, with General Sam Houston's compliments."

Needless it is to add that these souvenirs were quickly accepted and highly prized.

The blocks from which they were whittled were especially prepared for the general by the Senate cabinet-maker.

At church the aisles would be choked with people at the close of service, waiting for a chance to get near the big Texan, who always occupied a pew near the pulpit. And there he would stand, his commanding figure wrapped in a Mexican blanket in cold weather, meeting the people as they came forward, speaking kind and sensible words to each one, from the lowest to the highest.

He was a great fun-maker. Once, in April, 1856, he related the following story in illustration of a point in debate:

"It reminds me, Mr. President, of a trial which took place near here, before a magistrate who was endowed with a good portion of common sense and considerable integrity, but not a highly educated man—not a metaphysician. When the parties appeared before him, after hearing the testimony on the side of the plaintiff, seeing a good deal of excitement round him, he ordered the court to adjourn, and went out hastily with some bustle.

"Oh," said the people, "stop, stop, squire! You are not going?"

"Yes," said he, "I have heard enough."

"But," they said, "you have heard only one-half the case."

"Yes," replied he; "but to hear both sides of a case always confuses me, and I cannot give my decision. I am off!"

A Swedish View of England.

It is always interesting to observe how the habits of a nation impress writers from abroad. A sharp-tongued correspondent of a Swedish paper, the Svenska Dagbladet, thus comments on some of the peculiarities of English life and manners. Those who know England better will not take the comments too seriously, and will see something to commend in some of the things which the writer condemns—notably in the fresh air in the railway carriages.

English cleanliness is much spoken of. The Englishman must have a great deal of water to wash with. A quantity must be splashed all over the room, and in particular there must be a great pool near the washstand. When an Englishman washes his face, in seventy-eight cases out of a hundred he simply takes the water in his hands and blows it all over the floor.

Englishmen are mad over fresh air. The expression may seem ironical to those who know how in London one does not so much breathe the air as swallow it. Tramway car windows stand open the whole year round, and there is no country like England for the prosperity of dealers in cough and cold medicines.

Hygiene may appear to be perfect in London, but they still say that much remains to be done. Spitting is not allowed in the parks, at least not near the seat. I have found that one of the cheapest and best places for spitting is the British Museum, where it costs only ten dollars. On the Great Eastern Railway it does not cost more the first time, but afterward the price is twenty-five dollars a time, in direct opposition to the usual business principles of discount.

NOTES FROM ABROAD.

Swindling Operations in Turkey—Korea's Tobacco Smokers.

From a consular report it appears that a number of persons in and around Smyrna, Asiatic Turkey, are organized with the object of swindling foreign merchants. Several American business houses have suffered. Sending bills of lading in excess of real value of shipments, shipping raw materials of lower quality than ordered and giving short weights are among the methods employed by the swindlers. Names and detailed information may be obtained from the bureau of manufactures, Washington, D. C.

"ONE OF THEM KINGS."

Rear Admiral Samuel R. Franklin, who died a few months ago, wrote an interesting book on the "Memories of a Rear Admiral." In it he gives the origin of a story famous in both the United States and the British navies. Admiral Franklin was at one time commander of the Franklin. The story is as follows:

The King of Naples and his suite once visited a foreign man-of-war as it lay anchored in the bay. One of his suite, taking a wind-sail, which conveyed air through the hatchway to the lower deck, to be a substantial pillar, leaned against it, and fell through the hatchway, and broke his leg.

The officer of the deck did not see what had occurred. An old shellback quartermaster rushed up to him and repeatedly touched his cap without receiving any recognition. At last the old fellow could stand it no longer and shouted:

"Please, sir, one of them kings has fallen down the hatchway!"

Now for the origin of the story. When the Franklin was lying, years afterward, in the Bay of Naples, her commander lunched with a retired British admiral, who said to Admiral Franklin:

"Do you know that the ship you command is the one on which the story of 'one of them kings' originated? I was a midshipman at the time on a British ship, and our surgeon was sent to assist the surgeon of the Franklin to set the leg which was broken."

Trouble with His Too.

Mr. Wayback was tugging and straining at a bureau drawer that stubbornly refused to be opened. After five minutes' strenuous exercise, he remarked quite forcefully: "Gorram the bally thing, anyway! No wonder the government is abolishing all bureaus from the navy department!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Distance lends enchantment to the view of a dynamite explosion.

"Did you plant much of a garden this spring?" asked the head clerk of the cashier as they sat by the window at the noon hour. "You said early in the spring that you moved out of a flat into that cottage so you could raise your own garden truck."

"Don't talk to me about my garden," exploded the cashier. "I've been bunked the worst you ever saw. I've got as nice a little yard as there is in the city, but aside from a few dinky little flowers my wife put in I'm not going to grow a thing."

"What was the trouble?" asked the head clerk. "Seed not good?"

"The seed and the plants I had were exceedingly healthy, thank you," answered the cashier. "Too much so, I found, considering the kind of vegetation they turned out to be."

"Not the right varieties, hey?"

"Not exactly. The first thing I did was to break out a section of my spinal column spading up a place for my early potatoes. Fellow named Perkins, whom I've known for years, said he had a lot of potato seed that would raise potatoes big enough to eat in six weeks, and offered to give me seed to plant my patch. I could have bought all the seed I needed at the grocer's. But he was so nice about it and offered to bring them around to the house, so I thanked him and gave him a good cigar."

"I planted those seeds and watered them carefully every night, but no potatoes showed up."

"Every morning and every evening Perkins came and stuck his head over the fence to ask about those potatoes. Finally my wife got suspicious about his great interest and asked me how deep I planted the seed."

"Oh, about six inches," I said.

"How did you put them in?" she asked.

"Why," I said, "I put a handful of those little things in every hill."

"Little things?" says my wife. And out she went and dug down till she found the seed.

"They were buckshot which that confounded Perkins had palmed off on me just to be funny. When he asked me that evening how my potatoes were getting on I told him to come into the yard and I'd show him in about one round just how those potatoes were progressing."

"That was a mean trick," snickered the head clerk.

"You think so?" asked the cashier. "Well, Bill, the boss of the mill gang, brought me a basket of tomato plants which turned out to be milk thistles. I planted them and made myself the laughing stock of the neighborhood. Now, Bill is all swelled up with the idea that he is a great joshier."

"Pretty rough, that was," giggled the head clerk.

"I might have lived that down after a few years," said the cashier, "if a cousin of mine in the country hadn't told me to plant beans with tomato sauce. That was the lowest down trick of the lot. After I had them planted I did not get suspicious until some one told me I should have put in a nice piece of pork with the beans to give them the right flavor."

"I'll have to leave that neighborhood. The folks are geying me into insanity. They send me empty sardine cans with directions how to raise fish poles. They advise me to plant chickweed and raise a flock of chickens. I have a very humorous set of neighbors."

"However, I'm going to call a halt on the fun. They struck the limit when they sent a boy with a covered basket containing a kitten with written directions how to grow a bed of catnip from the beast. I'll brain the next delegation."

"It's early in the season yet," said the head clerk. "You still have time to fix up your garden."

"Not me," replied the cashier, decidedly. "Aside from the fact that I do not dare to show my face in the garden, I have lost interest in planting. I'm going to go in for yachting this summer and try to drown my troubles."—Chicago Daily News.

More Accurate.

The pastor and his wife had called upon a member of the congregation, a widow with a small but exceedingly lively boy, and were on their way home. "Well," said the preacher, "she seems to be a very intelligent woman, anyhow."

"Yes."

"And very positive in expressing her opinions."

"On the contrary," said his wife, "she struck me as being strongly negative."

"Negative? How?"

"Everything she said to her little boy began with a 'Don't, Johnny!'"

The Greater Character.

A man, no matter how capable, how theoretically wise or how singly successful, can find little satisfaction in isolation, for there is no glamor of romance in his career. Some one has said that the kingdom of romance belongs to David, not Samson—to David with his loving, generous, friendly nature, for whom three men went in jeopardy of life to bring him a drink of water—and all for love of him.

There's plenty of room at the top—with the possible exception of the attic room at a seashore boarding house.

It's all right for a man to hold three or four queens in a game of cards—but not in the game of love.

Men, women and children have the same chance. This contest closes September 28th, 1909. The envelope containing the correct number has been placed in the hands of the Seymour National Bank, in a sealed envelope, having been sealed by the decorator of the window, and absolutely no one knows the number, not even the proprietors of the store. The envelope will be opened at our store Tuesday, September 28, and prizes awarded. The prizes will be awarded to the first six persons who have estimated the nearest to the number of cakes of soap used in the construction of the Capitol Building as shown in our window. FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1909

L. ERT SLACK, who is still a candidate for senator, is to speak at the Labor Day celebration at Aurora Monday. He has held office nearly all the time since he has been a voter and wants to continue.

The city schools open next Monday and the first day is the best time to start. It takes one pupil about as long to get down to work as another, therefore those who start late are at a disadvantage. Parents should endeavor to have their children enrolled the first day.

The cooler weather today and reports of light frost Wednesday night cause the people to begin their fall shopping. Right here in Seymour is the place for all Seymour people to buy all the goods they want. Our store news columns, the advertisements of the merchants, tell you where you can get the goods you want.

TODAY Fred Everback makes announcement of his candidacy for mayor of the city of Seymour subject to the republican city primary election. He is the present efficient and accommodating city clerk and has demonstrated his capability as a public official. He has spent nearly all his life in Seymour, is therefore well known to the people and has a host of friends.

IN this paper today John H. Kamman makes announcement of his candidacy for Mayor subject to the republican city primary election. He is the present city attorney in which capacity he has served the city well for several years. He is a capable and successful lawyer, a well known citizen and has a wide circle of friends.

THE number of boys who smoke cigarettes is appalling and the wonder is that grown up men will supply them. Official statistics show the destructiveness of the cigarette to youthful smokers but this does not seem to deter the boys. Is it not possible that parents are to blame to some extent by not exercising their authority. When their admonitions fail why not try an old fashioned remedy—a bed-slat.

AND TAMPA IS STILL FOUND ON THE MAP

Prophecy of Destruction Did Not Materialize.

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 3.—Because their prophecy that Tampa was to be wiped off the map by a great disaster Sept. 1 failed to come true, thirty disappointed, footsore and weary disciples of the "Unknown Tongue" have returned to this city from Durant, twenty-five miles from here. Several days ago the party sold their all here and moved to Durant, which they were told would be outside the stricken zone. Their chief priestess, however, is said to have raised the price of provisions to the "faithful," the profits going to herself. The prophecy now has been revised to read Sept. 18.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts. He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. Constipation is the most unclean uncleanness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pilelets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

THE NOT LOVE GO, GO.

Now the people might be poor.
Now the moon more faintly glows.
Now the stars through the casement cast
Glimpses of the distant stars.
Now the clouds are all gone.
Now the world awakes anew.
Now the dawned hour is gone—
But not love go, too.

When old winter creeping mild,
Spirits even their wither'd
Stare the brightly glancing eye.
Laughs away the dancing light,
Now may forget their son,
Lilies may forget their day,
Spirits perch, one or two—
But not love go, too.

Palaces and towers of pride
Glimpse year by year away;
Gleams the river, no land order;
Even our very noble deeds;
When the all-consuming moth and rust
Shrink the goodly garments through.
When the dust returns to dust,
Let not love go, too.

Kinship and love like snow,
Softly melt like waiting flames,
Steadily the new people know.
Their duties, their worship,
At the last great hour of all,
When their children all things new,
Father, hear thy children call—
Let not love go, too.

MORRIS BOND

Mustapha Ali, half or chief of the scholarship of Ben Hassan—another gentleman—sat in the spacious tent, shaded from the glare of the tropical sun, slowly deciphering a letter that an envoy had just brought him from Rabat.

"The wall," he comments to pay the reason for the girl. Two hundred pounds," he said about when he had answered the contents of the document. "Bring the money to me, Mustapha."

The fascinated Moor, who had been standing like an ivory statue awaiting his chief's commands, advanced and withdrew, returning in a minute with a pretty, steaming English girl of 18.

The tent was lit, and, coming from the brilliant sunshine, it

"HAS HE SENT THE MONEY FOR MY RAN-SOM?"

was a few seconds before the girl made out the figure of the Moorish chieftain seated on some cushions, smiling blandly upon her.

"Oh! you're there, Kaid," she said, when her eyes had grown accustomed to the gloom. Then, noticing the letter he held in his hand, "Ah, I see you've some news for me. You've heard from dad? Has he sent the money for my ransom?"

"No, but it is arranged. The governor of Rabat's headman will be here at sundown with it, and then you will be free."

"What a pity," said the girl, with a sigh, sinking on to an old but gorgeous divan near Mustapha. "You seem in a terrible hurry to get rid of me."
"You prefer bondage?" The Kaid smiled. "Bismillah! Though an infidel, you are truly a woman."

"Yes, I prefer this bondage—if you can dignify my holiday here with such a name—to the real bondage my father wishes to impose on me—marriage. Marriage with a man I've never seen—just because he's a lord."
"You are not obedient to your father?"
The Kaid frowned and shook his head. He did not approve of disobedience in women. "If I were your father, I should—"

"If you were, that would put a different complexion on the matter," laughed the girl. "But you're not, Kaid, luckily—for you. Oh! I say, I suppose you thought yourself rather clever in capturing me, didn't you?
Well, you weren't a bit. I got myself captured."

The chief of Ben Hassan smiled incredulously and shook his head.

"What, don't you believe me? It's true. Listen. The lordling was coming to Rabat on a visit to meet his prospective bride—me—you know.
Well, I didn't want to see him, and I told dad so, and we had a row about it, and he said nasty things to me. Feeling desperate, and having heard you spoken of in Rabat as most gentlemanly, I determined to come to see you for a holiday. No, after inquiring the way, rode out to you, and here I am. But I did hope you'd keep me prisoner at least a fortnight.

You're most inconsiderate. I've only been here three days, and now you want to send me back to Rabat, and I shall have to meet that lordling after all. Can't you keep me a bit longer—until—until—"

"I fear that cannot be. I have sworn by Allah to deliver you up to-night, and—"

"Yes, yes, I know—you wouldn't mind robbing a man, or killing one for that matter, but you won't break your word. Well, I'll have to go. I suppose, but I won't marry that lord-ling. Did marry a nigger sooner—or even you."

"That may not be. A true believer may not wed with an infidel, like you."

"Because me, you're taught to believe, but then every religion counts a rival like the pot does the kettle."

"And you are not fat enough to marry."

"But, I'll forgive you. You have your girl for marriage as we do our daughters for Christmas. I shall have to look elsewhere for a husband."

"I have another captive—an Englishman, who is at your disposal. If you really want a husband."

"That's very kind of you, Kaid. Do you make a practice of giving men away? If so, I've a heap of spinster friends at home who'd be glad of an introduction to you. What's the man like—old and ugly?"

"No, he is young, but a most distressing infidel. He called our prophet a stolen impostor. I should have killed him on the spot, only your English government makes a great fuss about such matters. Still, he shall suffer—
I will marry him to you."

The girl laughed heartily at the Moor's unceremonious humor.

"You're really too cruel," she said.
"No, I can't lend myself for such an evil chaste. Besides, I don't want a husband. I only want an excuse for refusing the lordling. If I married your captive, he might want to follow me home. I'd like to see him, though. Where is he?"

The Kaid dropped his hands, an assistant entered, and the captive Englishman was sent for.

"Don't let him know I'm English, Kaid. Say I'm French," said the girl, arranging the mantilla she was wearing so that it partly hid her features.

"As you will," replied Mustapha, as the Englishman, his arms bound with stout cords, and struggling in the grip of those heavy Moors, was dragged roughly into the position.

Half choking with suppressed rage at the treatment he received, the man strove to move to where the Kaid was sitting, and, putting his face close to the Moor's, blurted out between his teeth:

"Look here, you Kaid. If there's anything of the man about you, take off those cords and I'll fight you and any two others of your gang with any weapons you like."

"That's splendid," murmured the girl. Then, speaking aloud, with a foreign accent, she added: "Oh, monsieur, you say—a bad word before me."

"I beg your pardon, mademoiselle.
I didn't see you. But this old rogue here would provoke a saint."

"I have found a Kaid charming,"
"Have you? Well, you must have very queer taste." Then, turning to Mustapha, he demanded: "What have I been sent for now?"

"This Frankish maid has need of a husband. Will you wed her?"

"If you agree, she will pay the ransom for your freedom," continued the wily Moor, with a leathery grin at his own astuteness.

"Oh!" exclaimed the girl sharply.
"It is but £50, my daughter."

"Oh!" And she nodded acquiescence.

The rites were performed according to the ritual of the church. A slight hitch occurred when the priest asked the bride her name. She at first declined to give it, then, finding she must do so, she said 'twas Julie Francaise.

"Eh? Ah, capital!" cried the Englishman. "We'll make it an international union. My name's John Bull."

The priest smiled, but made no demur. He was to be well paid, and their real names were not his concern.

"And so you're going away to try to find her?"

"No. I thought of doing that several times before I met you. Now it's all changed." He came and leaned over her chair. "Oh, Nell, it's wrong, I know, to say it, but it will out. I love you. I love you as I never dreamed I could love a woman. So madly, so passionately, so vainly, too. Forgive me, Nell, I ought not to have told you. I'll go—good-bye." He turned abruptly from her chair and moved off quickly.

"Bob! Stop a minute. I've something to tell you," she cried, rising and going to him. "I've let you fall in love with me, when I knew all the time you were married. You can't escape from her, Bob; she has your signet ring, with your crest on it.
What have you to identify her by?"

"Nothing."

"Kiss me, Bob."

She was facing him now; her right hand was on his shoulder; her happy, wifely face, with pursed-up lips, was offering itself to him. She held her left hand before his eyes, and he saw upon the third finger his signet ring. "Here is my right to your kisses, Nell."

"Why, it's—it's my ring, and you, oh! my darling you are my wife!"

Frederick Jarman in M. A. P.

Smiles of the Day

Two Different Settings.

A long-winded, prosy counselor was arguing a technical case recently before one of the judges of the Superior Court. He had drifted along in such a desultory way that it was hard to keep track of what he was trying to present, and the judge had just vented a very suggestive remark.

"I sincerely trust that I am not un-derly trespassing on the time of this court," said the lawyer, with a suggestion of sarcasm in his voice.

"There is some difference," the judge quietly observed, "between trespassing on time and encroaching on civility."
New York Times.

Dance and Refect.

"What a sweet disposition your wife has—and with all those children, too!"

"Yes. She used to be cranky, but the kids have got her so she minds all right."—Cleveland Leader.

She—Are you fond of music?

He—Yes very, would you mind supplying?

On the notice board of a church near Manchester the other day the following announcements appeared together:

"A potato pie supper will be held on Saturday evening. Subject for Sunday evening: 'A Night of Agony.'" Manchester Guardian.

A Camera's Role.

"Just the same, it's no snap," remarked the man who seemed to be speaking about.

"What's no snap?" queried the innocent bystander who had overheard.
"Making a time exposure with a camera," explained the astute thinker.

Two Lads.

"I'm introducing a brand-new invention—a combined talking machine, carpet sweeper and a letter opener," said the agent, stepping briefly into an office.

"Get one already," answered the proprietor, "I'm married!"—The Bohemian.

Wardrobe.

Madge—You must have managed to convert the poor girl, for she stopped crying.

Marjorie—That wasn't the reason.
She stopped when she found that she hadn't another handkerchief.—Puck.

A Suburban Text.

"Are your neighbors, the Hunters and Patrons, good friends?"

"Well, I guess. Why, they even praise each other's lettuce!"—Puck.

The Soft Answer.

Mr. Blower—Your automobile hit me, but I got its number, all right?

Fair Occupant—No, sir. It will make a capital decoration for your den.—Puck.

His Wish.

Little Willie—I hate to have my face washed.

Little Bobby—So do I. I wish I was a big man and could wear whiskers.—Philadelphia Record.

Joyful Thought.

He—Just think, Henrietta, in fifteen more years we kin get married.

She (ecstatically)—Oh, Jimmie!

Mrs. Long—Here's an invitation to Mr. Short's wedding. What on earth can we send the happy couple?

Long—I have it. Short borrowed $10 of me nearly two years ago. I'll send him a receipted bill.

Wrong Diagnosis.

Gyer—There goes a man who is afraid to think for himself.

Gyer—Why doesn't he get married?
Myer—That's the trouble—he is married.

By Way of Diversion.

"Say," queried the summer boarder,
"what can a fellow do to kill time around here?"

"Waal," drawled the old farmer,
"mebbe yew kin coax th' ole woman
tew let yer whitewash th' chicken house."

Mary At It Again.

Mary had a chicken small.
And she thought it immense
When the waiter handed her a check
For a dollar ninety cents.

Functions.

Teacher (giving a lesson on fractions)—Here, children, is a piece of meat. If I cut it in two, what shall I have?

Class—Half.

Teacher—And if I cut it again in two, what do I get?

Class—Quarters.

Teacher—And if I again do the same?

Class—Eighths.

Teacher—And if I continue in the same way?

Class—Sixteenths.

Teacher—Good! And if we cut our pieces once more in two, what then shall we have?

Tommy (after a long silence)—
Please, miss, minceste!—Amazons.

His Date.

He did display in Kentucky signs himself (Old Henry Clay Jones, when asked why he should prefer that title to his name, as he had no right to it, he replied:

"Yes, I has, sah."
"But you're not a Colonel!"
"But don't mean Colonel boss; dat means school!"—Exchange.

His Views.

"The only news I have to tell you," wrote the Billieville citizen, "is that the deer has six an' drewled all year cattle, an' yer uncle has broke full.
Elsewise the winter woman you was agout' for marry has runned off with a boot agent. Outside of these howdings, we air all durt' well!"—As-hara Constitution.

Familiar Names.

Former Episcop—You seem to enjoy those fresh vegetables?

Summer Boarder—Yes, it is an acquired taste. You get them from the same store up in Iowa that we do.

Expensive Luck.

Prisoner—Can I speak with the antwerp Smith for one moment?

Jailer—No, he has just left after finishing his drink. But ask me again in about a week.

Miss Four Knave.

Miss—I suppose landed is completely reconciled to the loss of her first husband, isn't she?

Emily—Oh, yes, but they say her second husband probably never will become reconciled to it.

A Descriptive Figure.

As an exercise has much to commend it.
Nervous tension is our great national ailment. It is getting into our bones,
as well as into our body and voice. It is time to relax, and even our girls
would not be less charming with a little more composure of manner.

And to the sitting position of the average young woman—it is not only
awkward and inelegant, but injurious.
In bending over a desk or at table,
or merely in conversation, the movement should be at the hips. The hip joint is large and admits of more freedom and grace than the spine. The chest should never be relaxed, as it throws pressure on the vital organs,
and gives one the round shoulders and
forward head so awkward in the young, and such an evidence of indolence in the middle-aged.—Vogue.

Old-Time Songs.

Nights when mocking-birds are singing, and the moon is big and round.
Then my heart grows big and tender and my soul seems homeward bound.

Homeward bound—aye, going homeward, dropping off its load of care.
And I'm just a little fellow, mother's soft hand on my hair;

And I hear her soft voice singing the old times I loved so well.
"Nelly was a Lady," "Effen Payne" and "Fairy Belle";

And my soul seems to be drifting half asleep out in the gloom
To the haunting, throbbing sweetness of "My Old Kentucky Home."

"Way Down upon de Suwanee Ribber," "Oh Black Joe."
I can hear my sister singing, hear the throbbing voices low.

Of my brothers in the chorus: "Comrades, fill no glass for me."
And the mocking-bird off yonder in the chinaberry tree.

Never trills with half the sweetness that came to me long ago
When my brothers and my sisters sung
the songs I used to know.

And my mother's voice went with me as I drifted off to rest
With her arms clasped tight about me and my head upon her breast.

It is only when the voices of the nighttime seem to run
Touched with silver by the moonlight
I hear the melody.

As I used to, hear the throbbing of the tunes my mother played.
Hear the voices blend in music—they come like a serenade.

Down the distance, through the moonlight, past the years and years and years,
Past life's heartaches and life's failures and its graves and past its tears;

And the music wipes the years out, wipes each grief out and each pang,
Till I'm just a boy and happy as I was when mother sang.

—Houston Post.

A Failure.

"Did you have any sort of a joy ride?"

"Nothing to brag of. We did hit three or four pedestrians, but not one was hurt seriously enough to go to a hospital."—Baltimore American.

The Age of a Chicken.

Teacher—Johnny, can you tell how the age of a chicken is determined?

Johnny—Yes'm. By the teeth.
Teacher—Why, chickens have no
teeth.

Johnny No'm; but we have.

THE ART OF WALKING.

How to Overcome Nervousness—

Health for the Walking Girl.

Posture—or right position of the body —is the first essential for health or grace. In order that there shall be no pressure on any organ in standing, or strain in walking, the weight must always be over the heels of the feet.

This may easily be acquired by rising on them, then letting the heels go slowly down, without tipping the body back. From this simple exercise one soon forms the habit of keeping the weight well forward—the center of gravity falling between the insteps.

In this position all pressure is taken off the back, which has borne our burdens quite long enough.

When a girl walks heavily she is always walking incorrectly, and is never graceful. Girls are not altogether to blame for this, as they are told from childhood to "throw their shoulders back," which has a tendency to put the weight on the heels, a strain on the back, and to throw the head forward. Instead, the young should be told to throw the chest forward.

and the head and shoulders will take their right position. Correct posture leaves each organ free to do its work, especially the lungs and diaphragm, upon whose action we depend for the very breath of life.

Incidentally women may be reminded of the effect which the proper carriage of the body has upon the fit and hang of their gowns. Most girls have an exaggerated idea of what clothes will do for them. Thus, the dressmak-er's art may cover defects of form, but it cannot make a stiff hang veil on a badly poised body, nor can any amount of silk, satin or lace hide an awkward walk. On the other hand, no gown, however simple, can detract from our admiration of a woman who is well poised and graceful.

The modern girl is at her worst when she walks. Her feet are dressed in low shoes with high heels, and her stride is out of all proportion to her height. Her right arm is swung vigorously back and forth, while the left one clutches a handbag, and holds it at the waist line, with elbow aggressive. Her chest is depressed and her head, with marvelous adroitness, is thrust forward.

The present fashion in shoes is particularly responsible for the awkwardness of our girls. Shoes with high heels tip the feet down, preventing the beautiful spring of the instep arch. If such shoes could be reserved for the house and girls wear well-shaped walking boots out of doors, they would not only be more graceful, but would find more pleasure in walking—which as an exercise has much to commend it.

Nervous tension is our great national ailment. It is getting into our bones,
as well as into our body and voice. It is time to relax, and even our girls
would not be less charming with a little more composure of manner.

And to the sitting position of the average young woman—it is not only
awkward and inelegant, but injurious.
In bending over a desk or at table,
or merely in conversation, the movement should be at the hips. The hip
joint is large and admits of more freedom and grace than the spine. The chest should never be relaxed, as it
throws pressure on the vital organs,
and gives one the round shoulders and
forward head so awkward in the young, and such an evidence of indolence in the middle-aged.—Vogue.

David Price, Corydon, Ia., says: "I was in the last stage of kidney trouble - lame, weak, run down to a mere skeleton. My back was so bad I could hardly walk and the kidney secretions much disordered. A week after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I could walk without a cane, and as I continued my health gradually returned. I was so grateful I made a public statement of my case, and now seven years have passed, and I am still perfectly well."

Holland Medicine Co., Scranton, Pa.

Dear Sirs: In writing you this, I am doing something that I have never done before, voluntarily. Several weeks ago I saw your coupon in the "Times-Star," and as a last resort I thought I would try your Haarlem Oil Capsules. You sent me the coupon, and to make a long story short, I am now on my second box. I am, or was suffering from what I supposed was kidney trouble, caused by an over-indulgence of beer, and the pain I suffered at night was excruciating, and left me feeling bad all next day. I have since then stopped drinking beer, thinking that would allay the pain, but without any good results. But your capsules have given me so much ease - I felt that not to write you would be doing you an injustice, hence this letter. I am going to continue their use indefinitely. Thanking you for your generous kindness in sending a coupon, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

GOOD SHORT STORIES

Former Representative Amos J. Cummings, of New York, was once city editor of the Sun. One Saturday night it was announced that all the saloons were to be closed next day. Cummings called his star reporter, Murray. "Tom," he said, "go out tomorrow and find out if the saloons are selling liquor." It was Thursday when Tom again appeared at his desk. "They were," he reported.

In one of the smaller cities of New England there was an Episcopal church, which had two mission chapels, commonly known as the East End Mission and the North End Mission, from the parts of the city where they were respectively located. One day the rector gave out the notices, in his most distinguished, high-church tone, as follows: "There shall be a service at the North End Mission at 3 o'clock, and at the East End at 5. Children will be baptized at both ends."

Roger, the celebrated French tenor, on one occasion was engaged for the sum of 1,500 francs to sing at the house of a rich financier. Roger sang his first song magnificently; but no one paid him the slightest attention, and the guests talked their loudest. Presently the host thought the time had come for another song, and sent for Roger. He could not be found, and that evening was seen no more. Next day a note came from him, accompanied by the sum of 2,000 francs. The note ran thus: "I have the honor to return the 1,500 francs which I received for singing at your party; and I beg leave to add 500 francs more for having so greatly disturbed the conversation of your guests."

A misguided woman once ventured to remonstrate with Worth, the man milliner, because he charged her $600 for a dress. "The goods," said the lady, "could be bought for $100, and surely the work of making up would be well paid for with $25 more." "Madame," replied the outraged tailor, "go to M. Constant, the painter, and say to him: 'Here is a canvas and colors, value $1. Paint me a picture on that canvas with these paints, and I will pay you 33 1/3 cents.' What would be the answer? 'Madame, this is no payment for an artist.' No, but I say more. If you think my terms are too high, keep the dress and pay me nothing. Art does not descend to the pettiness of haggling." History does not record the lady's reply.

In the first year of his practice, Judge Royce of Vermont was called to prosecute in a justice suit, and, fresh from Chitty, filed a plea in abatement, which he duly discussed. The justice, in deciding the case, said: "The young lawyer has filed what he calls a plea in abatement; now this plaintiff seems to be a very ignorant man, and his lawyer about as ignorant as he is, and his writ doesn't seem to be a very good writ, and doesn't resemble one much more than it does a hog-yoke; but the plaintiff seems to be an honest man, and if he has a just claim against this defendant, he shall have judgment." Whereupon, Judge Royce, elated at the result, but somewhat disgusted with the remarks of the justice, arose, and, making a very profound bow, said to the court: "I much thank you, d-n you."

IN A REVOLUTIONARY CAMP.

Letter of Gen. Greene Discussing Strategies of 1777 in a Sale.

A particularly good letter of Gen. Nathaniel Greene was sold in Philadelphia a few days ago, the New York Times says. It is addressed to Gen. Varnum and is dated "Camp at Cross Roads, Aug. 17, 1777." It is in part:

"I readily acknowledge the propriety of your observation that delays are dangerous, and that the prime of the season is wasting while we are basking in the sunshine of Pennsylvania; but repentance often comes too late. Could we have divined how Gen. Howe would have directed his future operations some part of your plan might have been carried into execution. The destruction of Gen. Burgoyne's army is one of the first objects upon the continent, but how to effect it is the question.

"You see, he moves with caution, notwithstanding our army lies before him. It is now a month since he landed at Skenesborough, his advanced parties have advanced only about twenty or thirty miles and nothing, or next to nothing, to oppose him. Sure I am he never would have dared to penetrate an inch if he had met with a serious opposition.

"Could I persuade myself that Burgoyne would not retreat upon the northern army's being reinforced, I would run all the hazard to attempt his destruction, but I am well persuaded that he would retreat immediately to Ticonderoga, where it would be out of our power to do him any great injury.

"Our situation is not a little awkward, buried in the country out of the hearing of the enemy. His excellency (Washington) is exceedingly impatient, but it is said if Philadelphia is lost all is ruined. It is a great object, to be sure, but not of that great magnitude that it claims.

"Rest assured we shall not remain idle long. This is a curious campaign. In the spring we had the enemy about our ears every hour. The northern army could neither see nor hear of an enemy. Now they have got the enemy about their heads and we have lost ours.

"I can assure you I was no advocate of coming so hastily here, for I ever thought Gen. Howe's motions very equivocal; but the loss of Philadelphia would injure us more than our taking New York would them, and it is not certain our rapid march did not hinder the enemy from coming up the bay to the city. That they were moving about the coast for several days is very certain."

This letter brought $195 at the Philadelphia sale.

"Business Is Business."

The immigrant from southern Europe is often a person of unpromising appearance, but he sometimes displays a surprising amount of intelligence. Not all the queer English of this letter which an alien fruit-dealer recently wrote to the New York Times can conceal its shrewd philosophy and brisk common sense.

It is twenty-seven years I live in the City of New York. I walk all day long in the dangerous streets, never get invested by electric cars nor automobile.

The only blame is mostly of the persons are sleeping or want too much commodity mistake the streets for the sidewalk.

When you cross a busy street at first watch the automobiles—electric cars etc. Run that moment till you reach the sidewalk and everything will be all right.

Walk slow when you are in the sidewalk but run when you cross the streets.

Time is money. Business is business. Sidewalks for the pedestrians, streets for the cars, automobiles etc.

If a driver have to watch every moment child, sleeping persons, in the streets take 1/2 day from Harlem to reach the Battery.

About children, instead of waste time to trouble automobiles etc.—why do not make a new law? One roof garden in every tenement house, and force by Law the Landlords (or Landlady to do it and to send the children in the roof?

I am been plenty times in the roof garden of E. Broadway, corner Jefferson (Manhattan) in the hot months. The children jump, play balls, sing in that little Heaven all glad to enjoy such pleasure; nice shade all around on the top of the roof—plenty flowers all around, water for drink etc.

Patrol the roof gardens—and send the children to play in it—do not sleep when you cross a street and do not be afraid of the automobiles—trucks etc.—Sidewalk for pedestrians—streets for horses, etc. Business is business. Time is money.

The Trolley as a Civilization.

In traveling on those fast, prompt, roomy, modern cars, run smoothly, without jerks over a solid road-bed by courteous employees, it seemed to me that this thing was being done even better here than anywhere in up-to-date Germany. And I recalled, with humiliation, the obsolete conditions generally obtaining to-day among our Eastern trolley systems.

I stopped off wherever fancy dictated, talking to farmers, storekeepers, professional men, traction officials, and railway men—all sorts and conditions of people; but keeping especially on the alert for an experienced, intelligent and communicative conductor.

He was not hard to find.

"What's your line doing for this part of the State?" I asked him.

"Doing?" he echoed. "The line's simply making it! I've been running these interurbans ever since Ohio first saw them, and I can tell you they've brought in a new day for the city, and for the village, and for the country. "Take this section of the road. When the company was securing the right of way, four years ago, lots of the farmers were afraid of the idea, and asked so much for the lease that the company found it cheaper to buy their whole farms outright and be done with it. To-day many of those same farmers are coming and wanting to buy their farms back again because they see what this thing is doing for their old neighbors." - Success Magazine.

Too Many Clothes, Too Little Brains. Some society women exhaust so much of their time and energy in catering to their vanity that they have comparatively little left for the things really worth while. Mrs. Grundy has more about slaves in America than in any other country on the globe. Multitudes of her devotees neglect their children, their homes, and their mental improvement, and resort to all sorts of expedients and extravagances to cater to their vanity.

It is not so much the purpose of this paper to condemn the rich for their wicked extravagance, as to point out the demoralizing influence of their vicious example upon those who cannot afford either luxurious dress or living. Not only much of the discontent and unhappiness, but also a large part of the immorality and crime in this country is due to the influence of the ostentatious flaunting of wealth in the faces of those who are less favored. It is a powerful undermining force in our civilization.

The mere possession of money does not give one the right to debauch his fellows, or to set an example which will make them discontented, unhappy and tempt them to strain to keep up an appearance of wealth, at the possible sacrifice of their integrity and virtue. - Success Magazine.

"You carry your neck like a scholar intent on an upper shelf book."

Said she: "It's only my collar." - Success Magazine.

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW

Foreigners living in Switzerland must pay a tax.

The largest locomotive in the world has been built in Chicago for the Southern Pacific Railroad. It weighs 195 tons without the tender.

Before the Russian war the street railway system of Tokio was less than one mile in length. Now the mileage is 100 miles, with a revenue last year of $775,000.

Strongest, blackest Kentucky or Missouri tobacco, if kept and properly cured for two or three years, whether chewed or smoked, has the smoothest, finest effect upon the system of any tobacco extant.

London was somewhat shocked and amused the other day to discover that the glass front of the portrait of Prime Minister Asquith at the Royal Academy exhibition had been placarded with a bill inscribed "Votes for Women."

A Western school journal is responsible for the story that a youthful pupil in the history class wrote the following statement: "The American War of Independence took place because the colonies refused to submit to taxation without temptation."

Ruskin's dislike of tobacco is believed to have arisen from the fact that it is a comparatively modern discovery. There was no tobacco in the Middle Ages. He connected "the noxious weed" with the decline of England as an art-producing country.

There is in London a school for mothers. One poor woman was dissolved in tears when her baby was undressed at the hospital and his wasted limbs revealed. She ingeniously explained her grief by saying that "it was a beautiful child last time it was undressed."

Hector Apollinaire is the name of a negro who was admitted to the bar in Paris a few weeks ago. He is a native of Guadeloupe, about 30 years old, tall and muscular, and very black. He enjoys the distinction of being the only one of his race among the recognized lawyers of Paris.

On the first night of the representation of a drama by Douglas Jerrold (English satirist, 1803-1857) a successful adapter from the French rallied him on his nervousness. "I," said the adapter, "never feel nervous on the first night of my pieces." "Ah, my boy," Jerrold replied, "you are always certain of success. Your pieces have all been tried before."

London has a new Chief of the Fire Brigade, Lieut. Sampson Sladen, R. N., having recently been elected to the place by the London County Council. The salary of the office is $4,500 a year, less than half what New York pays Chief Croker, whose compensation was raised a while ago to $10,000 a year. Lieutenant Sladen is not new to the fire fighting business, having been a divisional officer of the brigade since 1899.

A parson was sent for by a dying parishioner, who had always sternly refused to have anything to do with him before. He hurried to her bedside, found her in a most contrite mood and made the best of his opportunities in a long extempore prayer, ending with a sonorous "Amen." The last word made her sit up with sudden energy. "Aye," she exclaimed, "that's it! It's a' for men and nowt for us poor women in this world!"

The effect of singing on a child's health is dealt with in a memorandum issued by the Scotch Education Department on the teaching of music in Scottish primary schools. "There is no more health-giving form of physical exercise than singing," says the memorandum. "It develops, strengthens and maintains in good condition the lungs and other vocal organs, and through them exerts a corresponding influence upon the whole body," it declares.

Gratifying process in the anti-opium crusade in China is reported by the North China Daily News. In a recent issue it said: "The Anti-Opium Commission has decided on the opium prohibition laws on a graduated scale. From the current year to the fifth year of Hsuan Sung the maximum penalty for officials who should smoke opium will be strangulation; in the sixth year this punishment will be extended to gentry, and in another year to the common people."

The Lancet, the great English medical paper, says that Englishmen and Americans eat too much. It especially advises people of middle age and older to practice self-restraint in the matter of food. "As the fire of life burns less fiercely and the output of energy is smaller," says the writer, "so the fuel supplied should be reduced that the system may not be clogged with ash and half-burnt cinders, whereby the activity of the whole machine is impaired and may even be prematurely arrested."

The latest development in municipal ownership agitation comes from Chicago, where retail liquor dealers, groaning under the prices charged them this summer, are demanding a city ice-making plant from which they can get their supplies. The Record-Herald says that nobody need be surprised at the appeal; that "the tendency is only in its beginning. It will show itself in more and more instances as war is fate." The remedy for such agitations, the Record-Herald believes, "lies in such an efficient public control of consolidated industries as has yet nowhere been achieved."

Leonora O'Reilly, the vice president of the Women's Trade Union League, was praising this organization's work in New York.

"And it has a great future before it," she said. "I have no doubt that a century hence the members of the league will regard the woman-of-day as we now regard the farmer's wife of the early '40's. A Maine deacon of the early '40's was talking to the minister. He sniffled and whined:

"Oh, yes, Job suffered some. I ain't denying that, parson. But Job never knowed what it was to have his team run off and kill his wife right in the harvest season, with hired girls wantin' $2 and $2.50 a week."

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

THE EXPLORER'S HOMECOMING

Dr. Cook to Be Given Great Ovation in New York.

THE ARCTIC CLUB WILL LEAD

In Honor of the Intrepid Traveler Who

Planted the Stars and Stripes at the North Pole, the Arctic Club of New York is preparing to give an international importance to the reception that will be accorded Dr. Frederick A. Cook upon his arrival home.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Maurice F. Egan, the United States minister at Copenhagen, has telegraphed the state department that Dr. Cook's reported discovery of the north pole has been corroborated by Dergaard Jensen, the Danish inspector of North Greenland.

New York, Sept. 3.—To make the homecoming of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, word of whose discovery of the north pole on April 21, 1908, has thrilled the world, an event of national and possibly international importance, preparations are already afoot here. If the plans outlined by members of the Arctic club are carried out, the welcome Dr. Cook will receive in New York will be an ovation in which city, state and nation will take part, while prominent explorers—Cook's former rivals—from all parts of the globe will gather to pay their personal tribute to his achievement.

Among the most notable of those who in all probability will be here to greet Dr. Cook on his return will be Lieutenant Shackleton, the intrepid

LIEUTENANT E. H. SHACKLETON

Englishman, whose recent explorations in the Antarctic, during which he succeeded in pushing nearer to the south pole than had any previous explorer, made him a figure of world-wide prominence.

Members of the Arctic club hope that President Taft may himself be present as the nation's representative to welcome Dr. Cook. "Such an honor would be no more than fitting," one of them declared, "in view of the fact that the explorer has placed the Stars and Stripes on the apex of the world."

Among the explorers who are expected to take a prominent part in the welcome to Dr. Cook are the Duke of the Abruzzi, Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, Captain Roald Amundsen, General A. W. Greely, Rear Admiral George E. Melville and Anthony Fiala of this city.

No definite date has yet been set for Dr. Cook's arrival here. Captain Bradley Osborn, secretary of the Arctic club, said that the explorer is not expected for several weeks. "He is due in Copenhagen in two days," says Captain Osborn, "and if he came straight home would arrive in New York about the middle of September, but his friends believe that he may make several stops on the way home.

For one thing, the geographers and scientists of Copenhagen will tender him a welcome. He may go to Christiania to meet Captain Amundsen, the discoverer of the northwest passage; it is likely he will visit Belgium, where he has been decorated for his services to science, and it is scarcely conceivable that the British geographical societies would allow him to pass them by on his way home without an invitation to London."

Another Explorer Missing.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 3.—Some anxiety is felt in government marine circles over the disappearance of Captain Bernier, Canada's Arctic explorer, who left Quebec on a voyage to the northern seas in July, 1908. The last word received from him was last October, when returning whalers reported that Bernier had been planting the Union Jack on many of the islands in the Arctic sea. Since then nothing has been heard of the expedition.

The interest of the golfers of this country is centering on the links of the Chicago Golf club at Wheaton, Ill., where the fifteenth annual national amateur golf championship will be held, beginning Monday morning.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong And Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep your filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. Samuel T. Maddox, of 107 Pine street, Seymour, Ind., says: "I can truthfully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as a cure for kidney trouble.

suffered a great deal with backache, lameness across the loins and dizziness, but my worst symptom was dull, throbbing headache. I gradually run down until I was hardly able to do my work and many times I had to retire in the middle of the day. At times I suffered from dizzy spells and blurring of the eyesight and if I had not grasped something for support I would have fallen. I finally procured Doan's Kidney Pills at C. W. Milhous' drug store and used them. I have not had a single attack of any of my old symptoms since taking this remedy. I recommend them very highly."

NEITHER JUST NOR GENEROUS

Europe Has Its Doubts of Cook's Exploit.

TOO AMAZING FOR CREDENCE

That Dr. Cook Should Accomplish

With Such Ease and Dispatch and in a Seemingly Off-Hand and Unpremeditated Manner a Task Which Has Baffled So Many Better Equipped Expeditions Creates a Doubt of His Astonishing Story in Many Coldly Skeptical Minds.

London, Sept. 3.—While it has not removed the doubts raised as to his having really accomplished the feat he claims, Dr. Cook's narrative of his thrilling journey to the north pole, has at least set at rest the improbable suggestions advanced in some quarters Wednesday that he had attained not the north pole, but the magnetic pole.

Captain Roald Amundsen, in an interview at Christiania on this point, says: "Such a supposition is nonsense. The magnetic pole is situated on the American side, and it is quite impossible that Dr. Cook could have been driven so far from his planned route. I feel certain that Dr. Cook has expressed nothing definitely about the result. I know him to be absolutely discreet and taciturn. Other people have misunderstood him and it will be necessary to await his arrival at Copenhagen for the real facts."

The London newspapers are not wholly convinced by the narrative, and persist that it will be necessary to await more details and reports. They are unable to conceive how a task which has beaten the ablest polar explorers provided with everything that money could purchase, would have been achieved in such a seemingly off-hand and unpremeditated manner, and with such ease and quickness.

At the same time they pay tributes of admiration to Dr. Cook. The Daily Telegraph says: "It is for the moment beside the question to discuss the accuracy or probability of Dr. Cook's statement. It is neither just nor generous to question in any way the genuineness of such a claim before full details of the expedition are made public by the traveler himself. Indeed, we have much sympathy because of the difficulties by which Dr. Cook or any other solitary explorer is hampered in attempting to convince a skeptical world of geographical experts of the reliability of his observations and reports. We trust when the proper time comes for a full and impartial examination of the record of the expedition, Dr. Cook will meet with the fairness and consideration his particular case especially invites."

The Morning Post says: "If Dr. Cook has found a new track to the pole in so short a time as thirty-five days, others can follow in his footsteps and verify his story for themselves. When the matter has been settled beyond all doubt, the civilized world will acclaim Cook as one of the greatest explorers of all time."

THEY STOOD BY HIM

Because He Trusted Them, Esquimo Were Loyal to Cook.

Gothenburg, Sweden, Sept. 3.—The explorer, Dr. Otto Nordenskjold, who has just returned from an Arctic voyage, describes an interview he had with Knud Rasmussen, the Danish student in Greenland, who spent a winter with the Cape York Eskimos together with Dr. Cook. Rasmussen told Dr. Nordenskjold that the Eskimos at first absolutely declined to follow Dr. Cook, owing to the risk. At length some young men declared themselves willing to aid him in his attempt to reach the pole, and at the moment of starting several highly experienced men joined the party, saying they would not leave their sons and would not forsake this man who had trusted them.

Sued by Her Chauffeur's Wife.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Jessie Livingstone Forbes of Fairfield and New York, wife of the noted aviator, A. Holland Forbes, has been made defendant in a suit for $75,000. The action is brought by Mrs. Ida Rowley of New York, whose husband, Ernest Rowley, is chauffeur for the Forbes. Allegation of affections by Mrs. Forbes is charged in the complaint.

Another Pellagra Victim.

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 3.—Miss Mary Hornisch, aged thirty-eight years, for some years an inmate of the insane asylum at Jacksonville, is dead at her home in Washington, Ill., after being afflicted with the new skin disease, pellagra.

Volcanic Disaster in Java.

The Hague Sept. 3.—Dispatches received here report an eruption of the volcano Smeru, Java, causing great havoc, and a terrible earthquake, with hundreds of fatalities in the Besouki district.

S.S.S. REMOVES BLOOD HUMORS

Every pore and gland of the skin is employed in the necessary work of preserving its smooth, even texture, softening and cleansing it, and regulating the temperature of our bodies. This is done by an evaporation through each tiny outlet, which goes on continually day and night. When the blood becomes infected with humors and acids a certain percentage of these impurities also pass off with the natural evaporation, and their sour, fiery nature irritates and inflames the skin, and dries up its natural oils, causing pimples, boils, pustules or some itching rash, or hard, scaly skin affection. S. S. S. cures skin troubles of every kind by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood. S. S. S. cools the acid-heated circulation, builds it up to its normal strength and thickness, multiplies its nutritious, red corpuscles, and enriches it in every way. Then the skin, instead of being irritated and diseased by the exuding acid matter, is nourished, soothed and softened by this cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S., the greatest of blood purifiers, expels all foreign matter and surely cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum and all other diseases and affections of the skin. It removes pimples, blackheads, and other unsightly blemishes from the skin and assists in restoring a good complexion. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired free to all who write.

COPENHAGEN READY TO RECEIVE DR. COOK

Royal Welcome Awaits Traveler On Landing.

Copenhagen, Sept. 3.—So high does Dr. Frederick A. Cook's credit stand with Danish polar experts that the first message announcing his success in reaching the north pole, meager as it was, was accepted as conclusive. Commodore Hovgaard said: "I believe the message is true because Dr. Cook is most trustworthy and opposed to all exaggeration."

C. A. Nielsen, an official of the Greenland administration department, who is well acquainted with Dr. Cook and was associated with him in Greenland, said:

"When Dr. Cook says that he reached the north pole there can be no doubt about it. His scientific discoveries will prove that."

A committee under the presidency of the minister of commerce has been formed to arrange a fitting reception to the intrepid explorer on his arrival at Copenhagen. Dr. Maurice F. Egan, the American minister, is aboard a special steamer that was sent out by the Royal Geographical society today to meet Dr. Cook, who is on his way here on the steamer Hans Egede. The Danish government has dispatched the torpedo boat Jylland from Aarhus to meet Dr. Cook, and the Jylland will probably come across the Hans Egede off the Skaw. The commander will convey congratulations to the explorer on behalf of the government.

The special committee of the Royal Geographical society will invite Dr. Cook to be the society's guest during his stay at Copenhagen. Rooms have been reserved for him at the Hotel Phoenix. After a banquet on Saturday night—provided the Hans Egede arrives on schedule time—Dr. Cook will be presented to King Frederick. The king is evincing the greatest interest in the arrival of Dr. Cook, and it is possible that he will insist on an audience with the explorer immediately on his arrival.

The American flag is everywhere waving, as it is recognized that it is a typical American achievement.
